THE ART OF LIVING – MAY/JUNE

Veterans of the Decade

SAGID – the South Guild of Interior Designers – was inaugurated in 1954. Their aim was to form a body which would monitor and maintain standards of professional behaviour within the industry. In addition, SAGID was to promote the benefits of using interior designers in all fields of decor and design. A decade later has seen the incorporation of the Natal Association of Interior Designers (NAID); the total membership throughout South Africa is now 109. To honour the founding group who have retained their membership for ten consecutive years, the Guild has conferred on them the title: 'Fellow of the South African Guild of Interior Designers'; the fellowships were presented by David Hills. The fourteen are listed here:

GLENDALUNSKY

Based in Johannesburg, Glenda Lunsky has been involved in interiors for 20 years. She enjoys expressing her creative talents through decoration and more recently structural interior design and architecture in both residential and commercial projects.

She enjoys the appreciation of her wide range of clients and defines good design as 'Putting the heart where the home is'.
